Market Commentary:

Global Equities posted strong gains in the month of July resulting in a third straight month of positive returns, driven by favourable macroeconomic conditions. A benign interest rate environment and easing liquidity conditions due to central bank actions boosted investor sentiments. In the US, the benchmark S&P 500 index & the Tech Heavy Nasdaq index gained 2.2%, 3.7% respectively. UK's FTSE 100 and Germany's DAX index posted 4.2% and 0.7% respectively. Most of the Asian Indices too posted gains with South Korea's Kospi index topping the table with a 5.6% monthly return.

US corporates have largely reported strong earnings performance for the second quarter of 2025 ending in June. As per factset, more than 80% of the corporates which have declared results until August 6th have exceeded wall street expectations. Meanwhile, US non-farm payrolls rose by 73K jobs in July which was well below the estimates of 110k. The lower than estimated initial reading for July along with around 258K combined downward revision for May and June suggests a rapid cooling down of labour markets in the US. CPI inflation rose to 2.7% in June, from 2.4% in May. The S&P Global US Composite PMI rose to 55.1 in July 2025, as against June's reading of 52.9, the manufacturing sector too posted modest growth. US 10 year Treasury Bond yields remained stable in July, while the dollar gained against most of the major currencies.

The UK economy contracted by 0.1% in May as against 0.1% growth forecasted in the Reuters Poll. While the services sector posted a marginal growth, declines in industrial output and construction dragged down overall output. The country's labour market remained weak with the unemployment rate at 4.7% (in the three months to May), thereby reaching the highest level since July 2021. Inflation rate rose to 3.6% in June (from 3.4% in May) impacted by upward pressure from transport prices.

The BOE which had maintained rates in the June meeting has now announced a rate cut in August due to the sustained weakness in the economy and labour markets.

The European economy witnessed stronger than expected growth in 1Q2025, which is however followed by weaker prospects for the remainder of the year. The European Central Bank (ECB) kept interest rates unchanged in July, despite the lingering trade uncertainty stemming from US President Donald Trump's back and forth announcements on tariffs. ECB's latest decision effectively marks the end of the current easing cycle after eight cuts over the past year even as Inflation hit the Central Bank's 2% target in June. Brent crude prices rose by 5% in July to close above USD70/barrel.

Investment strategy

The higher weighting in the portfolios to European and Asian equities have helped in the year to date performances of the portfolios, a combination of a weaker USD and non-US equities making up ground versus US equities on account of cheaper valuations has assisted our performance. While recent inflation numbers on both sides of the Atlantic have remained sanguine, there is a concern that potential geo-political events may spook oil prices and in-turn inflation. While equities make all the headlines, we do see opportunities in fixed income, in particular with corporate bonds where yields are well supported by stable balance sheets.

Global emerging markets continue to trade at reasonable valuations and in general are seeing a favourable macro-economic backdrop, we are looking to add to this exposure both via both equities and fixed income. As the markets adjust to the Trump tariffs and in some cases looking beyond them, we are seeing pockets of value emerge.
